Gaspare Bitetto is an Italian born author, screenwriter, social media producer, and radio host who has written several books, plays, and screenplays. This debut poetry collection, first written and published online in 2005, is revised now as a first step in his long, and yet to be complete career. See more at www.gasperebitetto.com

«In this debut poetry collection, Gaspare Bitetto demonstrates a natural talent for fluid language, masterful syntax, and a somatic understanding of metaphor. Logos successfully places the human psyche under a microscope, inviting the reader on a kaleidoscopic journey through passion, flirting with light and shadow. These poems ask universal questions, and sometimes answer themselves with universal truths.» - Mela Blust, author of "Skeleton parade" and "They found a woman's body"

«Bitetto's poems are an exploratory tour of the universe using words that at times displace or shift the reader's boundaries. The poet describes it as "a kind of 'input' for the brain of the reader, who must create his own relationship between the text and his interpretation of it".» - Anne Milano Appel
