"I thought I wanted revenge - what I didn't realise is, I needed love!"

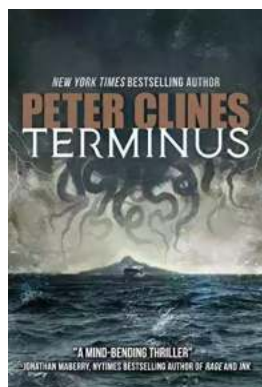

Zarrus has been trapped on Planet Prismn for three-long-hard years, sent there by his evil step-sister, Zyle. She drugged, bound and then bribed Taraquets to ship him out with a cargo of convicted convicts, all so that she could lay claim to his estate. Now, finally escaped from the prison fortress, Zarrus wanders the planet's surface, fighting for survival, planning his revenge and trying to find a way to get off the hell-hole.

His hopes rise when one day he sees a struggling Taraquet shuttle making an emergency crash landing. But what he uncovers inside will not only change the course of his future, it will also threaten to further endanger his life.

Nina plans to turn her life around. She's served her time and with no one to meet her on her release day from a five-year sentence, she finally realises that she wants more from her life – a loving partner and a family to call her own. She just hopes God listens to her prayers instead of ignoring them. Eager to increase the distance from the place of her incarceration and be on the road to a new life, she hitchhikes. Only, she never expected to be picked up by extra-terrestrials.

When she wakes to find herself in a place that made the penitentiary she just left look like Disneyland, she wonders what the hell she did to deserve such bad luck.

All my scifi romance books are enemies to lovers standalone stories. However, characters from my stories appear throughout the series linking the world I'm building. My stories have everything—action, adventure, fighting, alien males, feisty strong females, romance, love, and steam. But most important of all, they all have happy ever after endings.
