The stranger quickly regained his balance and spun around. He opened his mouth, then snapped it shut, his gaze narrowing on her face. The furrow in his brow relaxed as his eyes dropped lower, slowly trailing past her fur-draped shoulders, lingering on the deep vee of the sequined dress. His inspection of her body skidded to a halt when it landed on the gun she had pointed right at his gut.

“That’s a gun,” he stated.

“A man with a brain. What a unique combination,” she purred.

He took a step toward her, stopping when she raised the barrel. “I don’t know what your game is, lady, but...”

She hesitated briefly. An idea formed. “Take off your clothes.”

With Cavanaugh's goons closing in on her, on the run undercover DEA agent, Fallon Hargis, relies on her wits to make her escape, but is Fallon pushing her luck when she shoves her way into the hotel room of slow-talking, small town sheriff, Wade Tanner--then at gunpoint orders him to strip?

What choice does Wade have? He strips. Suddenly the game isn't a game anymore when he discovers she's been shot, and he's the only one standing between her and the men who want her dead. Wade has only one choice--take her back to Two Creeks, Texas.

But will his small town survive this sexy as sin, tough talking, undercover agent? Hell, will he?
