Madrid, 1936. Spain teeters on the brink of civil war.

As chaos erupts across the country and deaths multiply, Inspector Paco Ruiz is determined to uphold the value of life by investigating the most mysterious deaths and bringing the murderers to justice.

Over three gripping stories, Ruiz races to solve seemingly impossible mysteries while the opposing forces of Republicanism and Nationalism, dictatorship and democracy, love and duty, all rage around him and threaten his own life.

Deftly written and highly evocative of the turmoil of the Spanish Civil War, James Garcia Woods' trilogy of murder mysteries paint an atmospheric portrait of puzzles and passions in a country tearing itself apart.

James Garcia Woods was educated at the universities of Wales, Manchester and Oxford. Before becoming a full-time writer, he taught in England, Iran and Spain. He has lived with his wife in Madrid since 1979.
